THURSDAY EVENING, AUGUST 8.

RECOVERY OF A WOULD-BE SUICIDE.—A remarkable recovery is that of Thomas Switzer, of Allentown, Pa., the young man who, four weeks ago, attempted to commit suicide by gassing his wrists and cutting his throat. In order to do the work, he first broke open a barber shop, and, with razor in hand, walk three blocks to the house of a friend, and standing on the curbstone, at midnight, drew the keen weapon across his throat, inflicting a gash which lacerated the larynx and esophagus. Falling in the gutter from weakness, occasioned by loss of blood, he became unconscious, and would soon have bled to death had not his mother, who attracted the attention of his friend's mother, who aroused her son. Two physicians removed the young man to his mother's house, and, after stitching up the ugly wound, had him removed to the county hospital. The mother and young man were informed that he could not possibly live, but, before a week, he showed signs of improvement, and his improvement has been steady ever since. Yesterday he was permitted to leave the institution and walk the streets of that city with his neck bandaged. He is considerably emaciated, but in a few weeks will be himself, the wounds being almost healed. The case puzzles the doctors. Switzer is delighted. He says the loss of his child impelled him to commit the act. For several days after he gashed himself nourishment gushed out of the ugly wound in the throat. A tube was then inserted, and from that day his improvement began.
